1st International Mass Spectrometry School!

Dear IMSF Board members and Affiliates,

September 15-20 this year in Siena (Italy), the International Mass Spectrometry Foundation (IMSF) in association with the Division of Mass Spectrometry of the Italian Chemical Society will inaugurate a very important new activity in the field of higher education in MS.

Siena (Italy), September 15-20, 2013

The IMSS 2013 is a six day full immersion school aimed to give advanced education in mass spectrometry to graduate, PhD, post-doc students, and young working in the areas of chemistry, biosciences, food, environment, and medicine. The school should also be useful for allowing meeting of young scientists coming from different countries and for creating new links among young generation of mass spectrometrists.

Only the best 100 student applications from all over the world, therefore we expected that being a past IMSS student will soon become a highly prestigious education trait. Fellowships are available. The IMSS 2013 School is also intended to fulfill a major need for education that arises with the wide, new applications of mass spectrometry in various fields.
